Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

There are "sea lawyers," "yarb" doctors, and "gift of gab" preachers, and every now and then a "writin' chap" who masquerades as an editor. Often these "ersatz" professionals encroach on the others' domain and then we have a queer hybrid that no adjective fits. But for some years we have approached Christmas with the stalwart resolution to preach a lay sermon in this column. Each time we approached the task it seemed more formidable, so that courage ebbed and words faltered. The "efforts" went into the waste basket. But now the task has become a challenge which will not be denied.

Two thousand years ago there lived a Man, who made the dream of human kind come true in His own person. As He taught, so He lived. His teachings through the twenty centuries since His birth have leavened the greed and brute passions of mankind.

In time even the horrors of war were alleviated a little, by a regard for women, children and old people. In time even the yokes of slaves were cushioned a little upon their necks. In time the Nazarene's ideal of service gained ground among the intelligent. Men who accumulated vast wealth turned it back again to the service of their fellows. The level of human comfort and happiness gradually approached new heights.

These advances were won by the infinite sacrifices of devoted men and women through all the ages. The nineteenth century was perhaps the most fruitful in blessings that came from the Nazarene's teaching of the brotherhood of man. But man is both brute and angel. Each in turn dominates. We of today in this country wait and watch to see whether the primitive passions of men shall win and weaker peoples pass into a new species of slavery, or whether we, as a nation, may hold and carry the torch of a Christian civilization to world triumph in this twentieth century.

Christmas should not only be the joyous festival celebrating the birth of the Redeemer. It should be more than that. It should be a day in which we soberly think on how this world may be redeemed. In our own families, in our own community, in our own state and in our nation, we should strive mightily to maintain a close kinship with all humanity, so that the wrong done one, shall be a wrong against all. For after all the greatest teacher the world has ever known made His first precept that of justice. Not justice in the sense of meting out punishment to those that fall beneath our standards of life, but absolute justice of the spirit, which accords to all what each one most values in life for himself.

The human spirit, we have observed, is somewhat like the mercury that indicates the temperature. In some it rises to indicate, if you please, a medium warmth, a medium where the milk of human kindness does register in moderate degree. In others the spirit soars to heights of greater heat, indicative of a genius for living, for achieving the greatest service. And, lamentably, but true, in some that spiritual mercury lurks ever at the zero mark, rising but rarely, and but little above the status of primorial man when he first walked erect. Thus we are created and thus we must live and still feel that kinship with both the greatly endowed and with those whose spiritual heritage is little.

The teaching of the Redeemer shows us the way of redemption here and now. Whether or not we believe in other worlds when this one is done, the kernel of the nut is this: We have been shown a way of life, that is far better than the one we live. On Christmas day we should especially revere the Man who gave us that guide. For even though we watch whole nations submerged in the awful catastrophe of war, even though we see the innocent in torture, and the image of justice cruelly trampled upon, the truth will live. Eventually, at long last, in one age or another, it will rise to triumph, not in abstract other worlds but upon this little planet of ours.

HUNDREDS TAKE PART IN WHITE CHRISTMAS FETE

The annual White Christmas party sponsored by the Women's Civic Club was held in front of the Court House yesterday afternoon with elementary and high school children marching and carrying gifts for distribution to needy persons at Christmas time. The high school marchers made a stirring sight as they were led by three color bearers and the band in uniform, the muffled drum beats stirring the pulse of those gathered to view the program.

After a large city truck had been filled with gifts the elementary and high school students rendered several Christmas carols and songs. The band played stirring selections. All elementary children were the guests of Manager Will Tamblyn, at the free matinee in the local theatre. They marched in pairs as they had done in coming to the court house.

Mrs. B. Douglass thanked the group for the donations on behalf of the Civic Club.

TO REMIND AMERICANS OF FINLAND'S NEED

This is to remind readers of the Nevada City Nugget this Christmas week that the brave little Finnish nation is fighting for its existence against the Goliath, Russia. There can be no Christmas carols sung when mothers weep for dead sons and old men shoulder a rifle to protect the home-land; there can be no lighted Christmas trees in a land over which hover the Russian bombers sending to earth a rain of flames, torture and death. The best that Americans can do to bring to that brave people in the arctic twilight, a little of Christmas is to contribute as generously as each one can, money for medicine, hospital care, clothing, and necessities of everyday life, so that they may know the spirit of the Yuletide still lives in the world. Those who have contributed thus far to the Finnish Relief Fund follow:

Hans Kauppila	$5.00
Clyde Gwin	1.00
Fred J. Joubert	5.00
Sigma K. Scheck	5.00

ROTARY CLUB IS ENTERTAINED BY SANTA CLAUS

The Rotary club yesterday enjoyed a hilarious Christmas. The good turkey dinner served by Rotarian Dick Worth was much appreciated by the members, whose appetites were sharpened moderately by cheering Yuletide beverages. Each member presented to some other member a gift accompanied by a rhyme, jingle or limerick poking fun at the recipient's human frailties. Lou Kopp was an exemplary Santa Claus whose repartee and asides kept the club in stitches. During the dinner and festivities, DeWitt Nelson, song master, led the club in Christmas carols and anthems, sung with zest. At the conclusion the contents of the gold pan and the gifts received were donated to the White Christmas.

FIREMEN PLAY SANTA CLAUS TO MANY KIDDIES

The Nevada City fire department under the leadership of Max Solaro, fire truck driver and Vernon Sandow, is preparing to distribute toys to needy families in Nevada City, North San Juan and French Corral. Several hundred toys, automobiles, teddy bears, dolls, tops, etc, have been donated and repaired by the firemen until they look and act like new. Mrs. Max Solaro and her club, the Mes Aimes, sewed dresses for the dolls, and local merchants donated oranges, candy, nuts and cookies. The Womans Civic Club is assisting the firemen by giving food and the clothing.

It was found there are a number of families to be remembered, from two months to twelve years old and that there are from one child to eight and ten in the families.

The firemen wish to thank the merchants and civic club and all those who assisted in making Christmas a happy one for many children.

Merry Christmas!

Once more "Merry Christmas!", the cheeriest greeting in the world, the oldest greeting and the only greeting spoken in every language of civilization, becomes the watchword of the year's happiest day. But this year, for all America, the phrase should connote a solemn sense of gratitude to providence that this nation, in a world of war-torn, suffering and bewildered peoples, is at peace. "Merry Christmas" must sound as a cry of mockery in stricken Finland, and among the broken peoples of Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. Hardly, were she alive, could that great artist, Schumann-Heink, sing gloriously of "silent night, holy night"—save on this continent! The song would seem indeed a mockery in lands where the nights are hells of bursting bombs, flaming towns and screaming wounded.

Yet while Christmas cannot be merry in many bruised quarters of the world, its message is all the more poignantly forceful this year. Some day all mankind will know that a Merry Christmas is possible only where the ideal of Him whose birth is celebrated is dominant: "Peace on earth, good-will toward men." Here in America, in imperfect human fashion, that ideal is honored. Here men differ, and here—as in all places at all times—life is far from perfect. But here no one cringes at a knock at the door — fearing secret police; here there is no dread of the killing of children from the air nor the bayoneting of men because of their race or opinions. And for that freedom and peace America's "Merry Christmas!" this December of 1939 should be most genuine, even in the humblest home.—Contributed.

There Are Still Frontiers

The learned historian sighed wearily, closed the last of many dusty books he had been reading, and rubbed his hand across his eyes. Then he muttered, half to himself, so that the words were scarcely audible—

"There aren't any more frontiers," the learned historian sighed to himself. "They're all gone. There's no more room for adventure. There's no more room for achievement. All we can do is sit down and write books about the opportunities of the past."

Meanwhile, in an industrial laboratory in the same city, two men were bending eagerly over a small flame and an array of glass tubes. They were watching the last stages of an experiment that had taken over a year. They were research men employed by an industrial company; their experiments were being backed up by that company; and they were on the verge of discovering a new product that would mean new jobs and new paychecks for hundreds of men.

The learned historian would never think of looking for new frontiers in industry. Yet that is just where they are to be found today.

Today, these are to be found in science and research, working with American industry to produce the progress that can come only when new ideas are turned from theory into actuality. In that field, there lies far more scope, more of a chance for adventure and progress than Daniel Boone of Buffalo Bill or Davey Crockett ever had.

The learned historian, lost among his dusty books, is very short-sighted indeed if he neglects these things. Last frontiers? Americans will never recognize them. There are no last frontiers for America.—Contributed.

The Legion and The Bund

By adopting resolutions urging the outlawing of the German-American Bund along with the Communist Party in California, the state executive committee of the American Legion has aroused criticism in radical circles on a charge of "going beyond" the Bill of Rights. Doesn't the Bill of Rights, it is argued, guarantee "the right of the people peaceably to assemble"—which is what Bund members and Communist "factions" do when they meet? But the Legionnaires appear to interpret the Constiution correctly as they have fought for it fearlessly. The complete phrase guarantees the "right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances"! The Bill of Rights grants no privilege to organize and assemble to promote programs for the destruction of the United States government. Communists and Bund Nazis have no wish to petition the government for anything; they are organized to foment unrest to the end of obliterating American Democracy. s to right of the State of California to outlaw such organizations, the Constitution is plain: "The Senators and Representatives and the members of the several State Legislatures, and all executives and judicial offers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution. . . "

The limits of the most liberal and comprehensive document on the rights of man ever written, as well as the patience of patriotic Americans, have been exceeded by enemies boring from within under protection to which they have no right either in justice or the cold letter of the law. Many Americans of German antecedents, lured into Bund membership by misrepresentations of its aims, have indignantly resigned on learning its true purpose of furthering Naziism in America. The Legion points the way, perhaps, toward finishing the job—democratically, legally, and thoroughly.—Contributed.

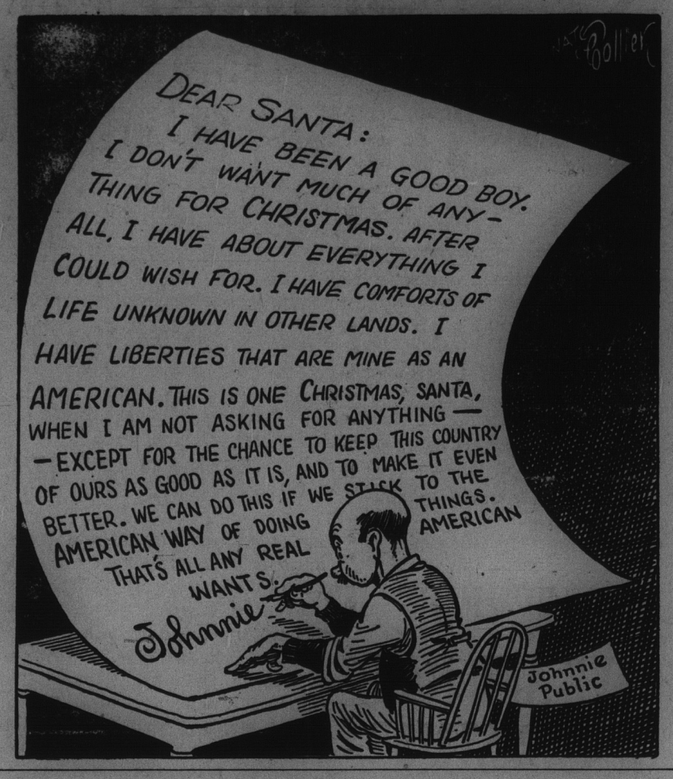
THE LETTER TO SANTA



DEAR SANTA:
I HAVE BEEN A GOOD BOY. I DON'T WANT MUCH OF ANY-THING FOR CHRISTMAS. AFTER ALL, I HAVE ABOUT EVERYTHING I COULD WISH FOR. I HAVE COMFORTS OF LIFE UNKNOWN IN OTHER LANDS. I HAVE LIBERTIES THAT ARE MINE AS AN AMERICAN. THIS IS ONE CHRISTMAS, SANTA, WHEN I AM NOT ASKING FOR ANYTHING — —EXCEPT FOR THE CHANCE TO KEEP THIS COUNTRY OF OURS AS GOOD AS IT IS, AND TO MAKE IT EVEN BETTER. WE CAN DO THIS IF WE STICK TO THE AMERICAN WAY OF DOING THINGS. THAT'S ALL ANY REAL AMERICAN WANTS.

CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

In a world gone mad with greed and graft, with bitterness, hatred and strife. A world where scientific genii have became the menace of mankind. A world where two thirds of the peoples are in a savage war, and the other one third is frantically preparing for war. A world where wise men are not enquiring the way to Bethlehem, and the shepherds are thinking in terms of profit rather than finding the babe of Bethelem. In such a world there is something terribly wrong, and we must find some relief. Where shall that be found is the question of the hour. If we continue the way we have been going our civilization will be blotted out.

There is no permanent relief or hope anywhere except at Bethlehem's Manger. There is where the Christ the Son of God was born who is the only hope of the World. There is where the Wise Men and the thoughtful Shepherds of every generation have turned to worship and adore.

Let that Christmas joy, that Christmas cheer and goodwill be ours to the nth degree because we love Him who made the Christmas possible. Let our gifts be given in His name who gave His life for the redemption of the world. Let us sing the carols in a major key because we know Him of whom we sing. He who is the Prince of Peace will one day speak and the war drum shall beat no longer and men shall brothers be the world over. Let us pray for the war stricken countries and the speedy cessation of this terrible carnage. and enter with our Santa Claus and our children into the joy and happiness of a glorious Christmas.

Wishing you all a very MERRY CHRISTMAS and a HAPPY NEW YEAR.
REV. DAVID RALSTON.

There's A Lesson Here

The strike in the automobile industry which broke all endurance records and ended only recently is probably better off as quickly forgotten as possible. But a glance at the vital statistics first should at least be serviceable in proving the futility of trying to olve emploer-yemployee problems on any other basis than mutality of understanding and the free interchange of opinion—in other words, through the use of the conference table.

Here are the facts on the strike:

It lasted 54 days, during which automobiles couldn't be turned out and men didn't work.

An estimated $102,000,000 in sales went down the drain.

The union was granted wage increases totalling more than $5,000,000 a year, but the estimated wage loss was around $15,000,000 for the strike period. In other words, it will take the men three years to balance the books on this particular part of the problem.

And public opinion as reflected in the editorial columns of the country's newspapers, has arrived at this judgment on the strike; that it could have been settled just as well, and in a manner equally acceptable to the men who held the jobs, by arbitration before instead of after production had stalled for a month and a half in the midst of the automobile industry's most active season.—Contributed.

STAMPS NOW BUY IN S. F. SURPLUS COMMODITIES

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28.—On a scale far larger than ever before attempted, San Francisco became the proving ground this week for a project that will provide new markets for California's farmers, new business for merchants and more food for persons on relief.

The project is the famous surplus commodities food stamp plan, by which the purchasing power of nearly 70,000 San Franciscans on relief—the unemployed and their dependents, the aged needy, the blind and others—will be vastly increased.

San Francisco is the largest city in the United States, and the first in California, to try the plan. Its success here will mean adoption later by California's other communities, for the State Relief Administration has signed a contract with the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation for the entire state.

That the food stamp plan will provide immediate benefits for California agriculturists was the prediction of both Jonathan Garst, regional director of the FSCC, and Walter Chambers, state relief administrator.

Said Garst:

"Since the farmers are being paid for their surplus products by the Federal government, and those products are being turned into regular market channels, California agriculturists as a whole stand to benefit materially.

"Many California products are among those currently designated as surplus crops by the secretary of agriculture.

"The food stamp plan will greatly increase the purchasing power of San Franciscans on relief. And it seems safe to predict a rapid rise in the wholesale purchases of the designated foods, for the relief clients will make their purchases direct from any grocery in the city, on whose shelves the commodities are already stocked."

It was pointed out that Rochester, N. Y., where the plan was first tried has enjoyed $80,000 more business each month because of the plan. In San Francisco, twice as large as Rochester, this figure probably will be doubled.

In preparation for inauguration of the project, the SRA established a $75,000 revolving fund to back the preliminary turnover in stamp funds.

This is the way the stamp plan works:

Relief clients are eligible to buy orange stamps (in 25 cent denominations) to the extent of $1 per person per week. With each $1 worth of orange stamps, the government gives 50c worth of blue stamps free.

The orange stamps may be used for the purchase of any food sold in retail stores, and for soap, starch and matches. Liquor and tobacco are excepted. The blue stamps are used solely for the purchase of food designated as surplus.

The merchant, in turn, places the stamps on special cards and when these are filled, takes them to the FSCC office, which forwards them to the Treasury Department. The Treasury Department sends the merchant a check within three days.

Or the merchant may turn the stamps over to his whoesaler or take them to his bank, which will credit the amount to the merchant's credit.

The following are currently listed as surplus products:

Butter, eggs, raisins, rice, white and whole wheat flour, corn meal, prunes, apples, grapefruit, oranges, dry beans, lard and pork except when packed in metal or glass containers.

The list varies month by month.

"Little boy, do you know what becomes of boys who use bad language while playing marbles?"

"Yess'm, they grow up and play golf"

HOLIDAY SNORTS STERNLY BANNED BY TRAFFIC HEAD

Holiday celebrants whose senses are affected by alcoholic liquors were given stern warning today to keep from behind the steering wheel of automobiles.

Traffic officers of the California highway patrol will be especially vigilant in their lookout for drunken or erratic drivers during the holiday season, warned Chief E. R. Cato, today.

It was pointed out that severe punishment is being more generally meted out by California courts for this offense especially since the use of pictures and other scientific tests for alcoholism are being more widely used by police.

Drunken drivers cause approximately 24 per cent of all traffic deaths and accidents, many of which occur annually during the holiday celebrations from Christmas to New Years.

"My advice to any celebrant who feels his liquor is to stay out of an automobile if possible, and certainly not try to drive," said Chief Cato.

"All officers of the patrol will be especially watchful for these drivers during the holidays because there are always more of such drivers upon our highways.

"Every available officer will be on duty New Years morning to weed out every reckless, erratic and drunken driver that comes in view.

"My advice is don't drink and then drive—it can't be done safely."

INJURED MAN CRITICALLY ILL

A message has been received by friends in Nevada City from Mrs. Ernest Peterson of Gerlach, Nevada, stating her husband who is in the Washoe County General Hospital at Reno, is showing some improvement in his critical illness. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson left here several months ago and he accepted a position with a mine company at Gerlach. He was injured when a blast went off prematurely.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Sweeney and granddaughter, Miss Jeanne Titus, left Tuesday to spend the Christmas holidays with their sons, Will and Ben, and families and daughter, Mrs. Mardell Sweeney, in San Jose.

SON OF MRS. SCARFE INJURED BY AN AUTO

Mrs Clara Scarfe of Boulder street received a message from her son, George, stating he had been injured by an automobile driven by a woman while he was waiting in a safety zone in Hollywood. Police rushed him by ambulance to a hospital for examination as it was feared at first his back was broken. This is the first time he has missed a visit home except during the World War. He is an employee of the McGraw Hill Publishing company and has traveled for the firm for many years.

Guests at the Charles Genasci home in Willow Valley over the Christmas holiday will be William Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Wright of Sacramento, and Emil Allen of San Francisco.

SAVANT TELLS WHY AMERICAS ARE UNITED

SANTA CRUZ, Dec. 21.—The sharp revitalization of the Monroe Doctrine, brought about by the new war in Europe and the attempted indoctrination of some of the Americas by agents of various European political beliefs, was described in a lecture before students and faculty of the Adult Evening High School here by Dr. Herbert Ingram Priestley, professor of Mexican history in the University of California. In his lecture, which was titled Streamlining the Monroe Doctrine, Dr. Priestley pointed out that the unanimity of action in the Americas in the present major issues is the fruit of a long history of unanimity of action in simple affairs.

More important, perhaps, he pointed out, was the effect that the exclusion of European imperialism from the Americas under the Monroe Doctrine was having an imperialism abroad. It is obvious, he said, that the sharp tensions of imperialism in Africa and Asia were in part the result of this exclusion.

"The Declaration of Lima and Panama within the past year show that this doctrine is capable of critical alteration or correction without express enunciation and that the continent develops a solidarity which flows from the long practice of attempts to solve American problems by Americans methods," he said.

The suspension of United States intervention in the political and the military adjustments of the other American republics the composing of international disputes, the Good Neighbor policy and the mutual understandings arrived at in the Lima and Panama meetings are evidence of the manner in which the Monroe Doctrine issues have been streamlined into a pliable, flexible and highly efficient agency of action and policy, the speaker pointed out.

CENTRAL VALLEY PROJECT GIVES WORK TO 5,000

Employment on the Central Valley Project has passed the 5,000 mark.

In the latest official report announced today by Walker R. Young, supervising engineer for the United States Bureau of Reclamation, the total is 5,030. It includes 3,898 contractors' employees working on the Shasta Dam, the Shasta railroad relocation, the Contra Costa Canal and Friant Dam; 727 Bureau of Reclamation engineers, clerks, inspectors and surveyors, and 405 Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees engaged principally in clearing the Shasta Reservoir site.

For each person thus directly employed on project construction, it is estimated at least two others are given work indirectly in the production and transportation of materials and equipment used in the construction.

Mr. Young said nearly 7,500,000 man -hours of labor have been expended directly on the project since the start of work in 1937, and probably an additional 15,000,000 man-hours indirectly in California and many other states.

He warned that job-seekers should not flock to the scene of construction unless they have assurance in advance that they will be employed. Generally the supply of labor has been more than adequate. The latest influx of unemployed persons has been to the site of Friant Dam where the number of applicants now far exceeds the number of workers needed for early construction.

STUDENTS ARE HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS

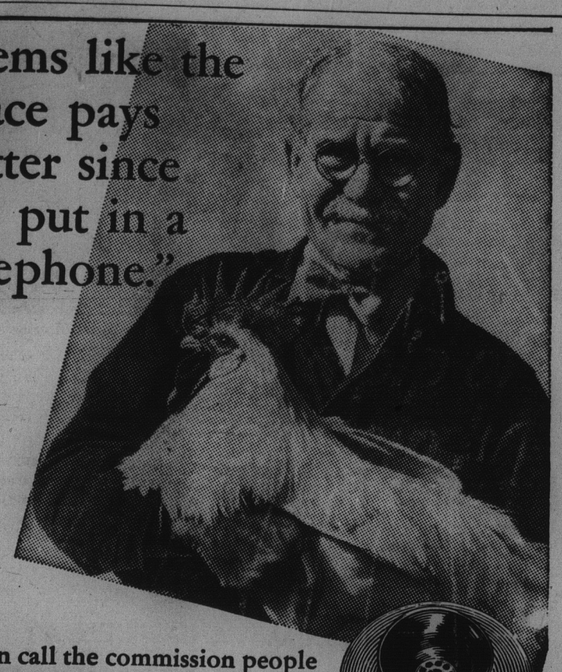
Letter to handwriting expert: Please find specimen of my beau's handwriting. Can you tell me if he's likely to make a good hubby?"

Answer: "No, I'm afraid not, my dear; he's been a pretty punk one to me for three years. However, thanks for the evidence."

"Seems like the place pays better since we put in a telephone."



"I can call the commission people or the farm adviser...or reach my neighbors easier. And we hear from folks oftener, too. Yes sir, it pays to have a telephone."

MOVING DATE OF THANKSGIVING IS ANOTHER FLOP

The latest New Deal scheme to give business a shot in the arm has flopped as dismally as all the rest.

That scheme, you will remember, was to change Thanksgiving day from Nov. 30 to Nov. 23. The President's theory was that since Christmas shopping did not get under way until after Thanksgiving, by moving that holiday one week ahead, the retailers of the nation would have an extra week of good business.

That was the theory. Here's how it has worked out.

The Federal Reserve Board reports that department store sales in the country as a whole for the week ended December 2—the extra week of Christmas shopping—declined 5 per cent compared with the corresponding week a year ago when Thanksgiving was observed as usual on the last Thursday in November.

In only four of the 12 Federal Reserve districts did department store sales show small gains and these were more than offset by losses in the other districts.

In the Boston area a gain of 22 per cent last year over the preceding year was turned into a loss of 29 per cent this year.

So the great Thanksgiving Day experiment takes its place along with the slaughter of 6,000,000 pigs and the plowing up of every third row of cotton as just another New Deal folly.

"Can I find you a strap?" said the young man in the street car.

"Thank you," she replied, "But I have just found one."

"Good," he replied, "then perhaps you wouldn't mind letting go of my tie."

MARTIN DIES IS FIGHTING AN UPHILL BATTLE

By JAMES PRESTON

With Congress soon to determine whether it will continue the Dies Committee investigation of "isms", the real story behind Representative Martin Dies is one of Washington's most interesting.

The story starts back before 1920 when a gangly youth whose father was an outstanding member of the House of Representatives. Young Martin, who went to Washington with his father and was graduated from law school there, caught the political bug. His ambition was to follow in his fathers' footsteps.

In 1931 after his father had died, Martin Dies, then only 30, was elected to represent his father's old Texas district. Young, husky, full of ambition, he realized that if he injected himself into affairs of the House too prominently at first, the older members wouldn't like it.

So Dies decided to stay out of the public eye until he got acquainted. He organized what he called the "Demagogues' Club". And soon as any member, old or young, made a rousing speech for economy and then voted for a big appropriation, Dies ushered him into the cloakroom where, before a laughing group of fellow Congressmen, the man was made a member of the "Demagogues' Club."

This fun making won Dies many friends, among them Speakers Rainey of Illinois, Byrns of Tennessee and Garner of Texas, all of whom he inducted into the club. About that time the Texas youngster decided he was ready to branch out.

He became interested in silver, knowing that some legislation was coming along soon. So when the existing silver purchase plan first was suggested, Dies put it into bill form. He became so well informed on the subject that the House Ways and Means Committee, one of the hardest boiled and best posted in Washington, spent four hours instead of the usual 15 or 20 minutes ,discussing the subject.

The silver bill became law. As a reward, Dies got a place on the important Rules Committee. That wasn't enough to keep him busy, so it was only natural that he should become interested in "isms." They were new to him because they are little heard of in Texas.

After much preliminary study, he gat the House to adopt a resolution creating his committee and giving him $15,000 for an investigation of un-American isms.

Then Dies got his first set back. The House allowed him only $15,000 because the resolution creating his committee specifically empowered him to borow clerks and investigators from existing government agencies. But he was refused help by the Justice Department, the Labor Department, and several other agencies, all of which were aiding the LaFollette Committee in the Senate.

Next, in order to trace financial contributions to "ism" organizations, Dies requested a Presidential order, like that given to the Senate Lobby Investigating committee, permitting him to inspect Federal income tax returns. That, too, was denied him.

Dies went ahead with the investigation. He decided that the only way to do it was to "stage a headline show" and get the House to appropriate more money. He succeeded, but in the initial headline hunting stage he erred. He let witnesses rave and rant and talk pure hearsay. He got the additional money, but he had created an unfavorable impression of the committee in many responsible Washington quarters.

When the committee really got down to work, this unfavorable impression was reflected in a series of incidents. He was accused of calling Shirley Temple a Communist when the record shows that one witness simply said that he had unwittingly let her name be used by a Communist organization.

Most recently he was accused of publicizing a mailing instead of a membership list of the American League for Peace and Democracy, which is described as a "Communist front" organization. Records show that the list was a membership roster.

Through recent months, Dies has realized that powerful forces were aligned against him. As a result, he took his story to the country, making several dozen speeches from coast to coast in the hope that popular sentiment would force continuation of his committee so it may remain on guard against alien "ism" propaganda which might get the United States into war. Tired out, he returned to Washington recently only to hear it had been decided by opponents that his committee should die. Wearied by two years of uphill battle, conscious that he has made many mistakes, afraid that "ism' advocates and fellow travelers will sabotage his work, he threatens to give up the whole thing.

He is described as "ill" or "resting." As a matter of fact, he is simply letting others wind up current hearings while he tries to make up his mind whether the fight is worth the effort. He knows, as do those in Washington who would stop his investigation, that a public demand can continue the committee and its work.
